

Craster

Craster is a picturesque fishing village on the Northumberland coast, approximately 8 miles east of Alnwick. Known for its traditional stone cottages, working harbour and historic herring industry, the village offers an authentic coastal setting with rugged cliffs, scenic walking paths and views across the North Sea. The small harbour, fishing boats and surrounding coastline provide a variety of filming opportunities, particularly for period dramas, rural stories and atmospheric coastal scenes. Nearby Dunstanburgh Castle and the sweeping beaches add further visual interest to the surrounding area. Craster is accessible via local roads from the A1 and Alnwick, with Alnmouth railway station providing connections to Newcastle and direct services to London King's Cross.
