

Howick Hall

Howick Hall is a historic country house and garden estate on the Northumberland coast. Designed by architect William Newton in 1782, the hall was the ancestral home of the Grey family and the residence of Charles, 2nd Earl Grey, the British Prime Minister associated with Earl Grey tea. The estate offers a variety of filming settings, including elegant Georgian architecture, formal terraces, landscaped gardens, woodland walks and an extensive arboretum. The combination of historic buildings and natural surroundings makes it suitable for period drama, heritage productions and countryside sequences. There are also blocked off areas of the house, that have been left untouched for decades, and has proved effective for commercial and editorial projects. The grounds are open to visitors seasonally, with limited access to the privately occupied hall itself.
